外国人 : There's a pond here?!

肘 井 : In the Edo period, there used to be a daimyo's residence here, so the pond is reminiscent of the history, I guess.

外国人 : Amazing. It's a nice area to walk around in. So, where are you going to take me today?

肘 井 : I'm going to take you to a very unique place.

外国人 : A very unique place?

肘 井 : Yes! You'll have lots of fun there.

外国人 : What is this place? It's got a mysterious atmosphere.

肘 井 : It's a science-themed bar. All the items on display here are made for professional scientific use.

外国人 : Cool.

肘 井 : To begin with, you have to wear a lab coat at this bar.

外国人 : How interesting! We're like scientists!

外国人 : Is this a glass beaker? It looks like some kind of experiment!

肘 井 : Yeah! It's fun. It brings back memories of schooldays.

外国人 : I did well in chemistry. How about you, Mika?

肘 井 : Well, I'm not good with science.

外国人 : Oh, really? That's too bad. But that phrase was a good one!

肘 井 : What?

※ワンポイント解説

外国人 : This is uniquely exciting!

肘 井 : Just like I told you, right?

肘 井 : You can use this microscope too.

外国人 : Wow, Mika! It's fascinating to look at this dried squid under the microscope.

肘 井 : You're right! This is great! I wonder if we can make a great discovery of the century about dried squid.

外国人 : Mika, I doubt that.
